Inference That Poverty Drove Her to the Crime,

New York, June 21 .- The World publishes the following: This is the true story of my life. So much has been written regarding my past and present that I feel the world should hear my side.

My early childhood was bright and happy. I was adopted by my grandfather, ditions and record. It is estimated that James J. MccNally, when I was little within thirty days 175,000 people will be more than two years old. My father had vaccinated. died leaving a young yidow who was unable to support herself and whose family res not in a position to assist in caring for us. My mother's people were not in the same class socially as my ancestors on the McNally side. They were poor and for several generation at least one member of the family always suffered from mental weakness and consequent moral lapses. This was not only a burden, but also a inancial inconvenience to the others.

My sister, Mary Jane Terry, was married o Victor M. Deake. He died, and she went insane with grief, and is now confined in the asylum at Middletown, N. J. My earliest recollection is of the love and tendernoss-maternal in the extreme-bestowed upon me by my foster mother, Mrs. McNally, she who is now my warm friend and companion. My grandfather was the editor of the town paper, and we were very comfortably situated. Mr. Mc-Nally owned his home, and while we did not have any luxuries, we never lacked the necessities of country life.

When I was three years old I could re seat whole bookfuls of childish verse. My namma (Mrs. McNally) had read them to me so frequently that I could open the book at the picture and pretend to read the text. Really I was only repeating the verses from memory. I searned to set type and spent manny a happy hour in the effice, where I ran about the long tables, the little pompon on my hat barely reaching the top of the table.

One day, when I was about seven years id. I stood at the typesetting machine, when a gentleman who was calling on my inther asked me how I learned to "set up writing." I lifted my childian face to his and demurely said. "Do you mean manuseriot? Oh, I did that a long time ago," As a child I found all my amusement in eading romantic novels and tales of thrilling adventure. I had a fine opportunity to see all the new publications and the daily papers which were received at the office in exchange. I did not care for the society CHILDREN WHILE TEETHING, with of the young men in the villiage-they were too uncouth in manner and fond of CHILD, SOFTENS the GUMS, ALLAYS haydenish sports. My tastes were quieter, all PAIN, CURES WIND COLIC and is and gradually I grew away from my child-

When I was sixteen I taught school in the villiage, and that work I loved. The raining up of the young mind, the pleasure of watching the intelligence develop. has seemed to me real work, both elevating and entertaining.

I had several beaux, but none ever appealed to my intelligence sufficiently for me to care to have him call on me. My

Then I met George Barrow! He was of class from the men I had previously met, and I loved him. He is tall and elender, the contour of his figure youthful. He has curly, wavy, lightbrown hair, a wide intellectual forchead and a square, firm chin. His teeth are good and his eyes are deep, stendy blue. He has a forceful way of looking a woman in the eyes. If she loves him ene is un-Five years ago we were married in the little country church, with the peaceful surroundings of a villiage bridal party. My father was a confirmed invaild, a paralytic. He and my dear mother, with no particular argument for or against, disapproved of my marriage. George Barrow is a native of Indianopolis. His people are very well to do. He had every early knew how to do a dozen things well, but known. did not seem to have the ability to provide us with a living. We both worked at typesetting, and at space reporting. Whenever we had a few dollars and could manage to live at all we were together. We were very harpy and loved each other quarly. My hisband is a man of absolutely no views. Somehow he simply can't get on. He is Washington, June 21.-Director Merriam of the consus bureau, has arranged for examinations for appointments to the eneus bureau to bt held ut Cincinnati Chleago, St. Louis, St. Paul, Omuha, New Orleans and Atlanta in September. Th number so far eligible for appointment is 250 and by February 1 of next year, it 2.000, though the ma ority of cierks will not be appointed until July of next year. Governor Merriam estimates that the coming remise will show a population of about 72.800,000, taking into account among things, the falling off of immigration in recent years. The closing of a contract with Washington capitalists for the erection of a building for the exclusive asse of the census bureau, the direcinr estimates will produce a saving of $100.000 a year. This is based upon the delays in the last census by the separalously addicted to the butter habit; that tion of the force into various buildings, occusioning a loss of both time and money.
